This whole house remodel is highlighted with the relocation of the kitchen to the screened-in porch. The dark, dated Williamsburg Colonial style of this home was traded for bright, updated living areas defined with a fresh new color palette throughout. In the kitchen, the use of corbels, heavy crown molding, fluted columns and decorative island legs serves to create an atmosphere that reflects the homeowners' distinctive taste. Flowing marble countertops and slab backsplashes, contrasting with a dark granite island top and dark tile floors, truly take your breath away when you first set eyes on this exquisite new space.
